

They are a gorgeous looking bunch of girls at first glance.

But drag your eyes away, and you see they are really fellas.

What a drag!

★ WITH their six-inch heels, two-inch false eyelashes, sleek thighs and come-hither pouts, they'd get a wolf whistle down any street.

But don't fall for their seductive charms, lads. For these saucy sirens are all fellas!

They were the line-up of finalists at Hammersmith Town Hall last night in the contest to choose Miss London Drag, 1977.

Just like those gorgeous creatures seeking to be Miss World, the drags of London paraded in ball gowns, bikinis and fancy dress. They were then interviewed for poise and personality.

First prize at this altogether gay evening was a continental holiday for two.

Said the organiser, theatrical agent Barry Sullivan: "We plan to run regular contests now. And these will all be done tastefully."

Traditionalists who prefer the real thing to the imitation will be glad to know there were two genuine females among the drags.

Actress Diana Dors and 20-year-old blonde Jane Hargrave, the 35-24-35 Penthouse Pet of the Year, were on the judging panel.
