Whippings, Jail For 9 Saudi Transvestites

SF Chronicle, 04/20/2000

And you thought being read in the United States was tough - Cyndi

Riyadh, Saudi Arabia

Nine young Saudi men have each been sentenced to more than lashes and at least five years in prison for deviant sexual behavior, a police officer said yesterday.

A court in the western city of Qunfuda sentenced five of the men to six years in prison and 2,600 lashes. The men are to be flogged 52 times in 50 sessions, the officer said on the condition of anonymity.
The four other defendants were sentenced to five years and 2,400 lashes. They are to be flogged 48 times in 50 sessions. There will be a pause of 15 days between each
of the flogging sessions.

Police started tailing the nine after reports that they were acting strangely, the officer said. He said police found that they were dressing in women's clothing and engaging in deviant sexual behavior with each other.

Men and their contests

May 3, 2000

Any woman who doubts that there are important differences between us and the guy types, listen to what Yankee coach (and cancer survivor) Joe Torre said when he called up Mayor Rudy Giuliani last week after the news broke that the mayor has cancer:

"Your cancer headlines were bigger than my cancer headlines," he told Rudy.

He was joking, of course. But still -- to which of us blessed with double X chromosomes would this particular form of cancer consolation have ever occurred, even in jest?

Joe Torre's remarks made a bigger impression on me than they might have because I happened to read them on the same day I overheard the following conversation between two preschool-aged males, my son Bair and his buddy Gino:

Mom had just strapped the two of them into the backseat and handed each a box of juice. Vigorous sucking noises ensued. A few moments later I heard Bair's voice from the back seat.

"You finished your juice, Gino. I still have my juice. I drank slower than you. That means I won."

Don't get me wrong here: I know girls can be intensely competitive over soccer, Barbies, boys or math. I myself have been known to go for the jugular in Monopoly. Certainly, like most women, if I'm in a contest, I want to win it. However, as competitive as I consider myself, it would definitely not have occurred to me to turn juice-drinking or cancer headlines into such a battle to be won.

And therein, I submit, in spite of my unscientific research sample, lies the key difference between the average man and the average woman. What testosterone does to your brain, apparently, is make you see contests in the same way a thirsty person in the desert "sees" an oasis everywhere. Where a normal person (i.e. a woman) would see only the most innocent social interaction, the typical person of male persuasion sees a battle to be won, a hierarchy to be climbed, an opportunity to enjoy the thrill of victory and to avoid the agony of defeat.

Don't think I'm kvetching. Far be it from me to disturb God's magnificent plan. Besides, testosterone has its uses. Consider Travis Christie, whom you might consider the world's most unlikely hero. Travis is 50 years old, not some young buck, and he works as a model's agent, not as a bouncer at a bar. The New York Post reports he has a "small build," and Travis wouldn't fight you about that. "I'm not a big guy," he admits, "but I'm strong. I'm also very hyper, so I'll stand up to anyone."

On Wednesday, April 26, "anyone" included a would-be mugger whom police identify as Jerrod Ford, 31, of Queens. Travis had spotted this suspicious guy checking out a pregnant woman with a baby carriage as she waited for the Eighth Avenue subway. Minutes later, the mugger whips out a knife and starts toward the pregnant mom.

That's when Travis made his move.

"You want to go after someone? Go after me!" he told the surprised mugger. "That's when I grabbed a garbage can lid and chased him. I can't believe I did that, but all I was thinking was, 'What if he kills someone?'"

The mugger fled, and Christie alerted the token-booth clerk, who called the police, who collared the suspect, for a happy ending all around.

"It's nice to see someone get involved like that," Sgt. William O'Brien, the transit cop who arrested Ford, said, in the understatement of the year.

Many of us would have fled in fear or only called the cops and let the guy get away. But Travis took it personal-like. And I for one, as a formerly pregnant mom who has done her share of time pushing a stroller through the subway, would like to say to this particular good guy and to all the other good guys out there: Thank you.

The author of the article ended her piece with a thank you to the brave soul who chased off the would-be mugger. Her thank you should have been to that misunderstood and much maligned hormone: testosterone! - Barbara [REDACTED]

The latest from Sacramento

Shirley Bushnell has informed us that A.B. 1851 was approved by the Assembly and sent to the State Senate. Apparently, it apparently received a large bipartisan vote in favor of it.

A.B. 1851 is the bill to clarify court procedures for recognizing a person's change of gender.

QUEENSPEAK

CALIFORNIA DREAMIN' 2001

California Dreamin' 2001 will take place from April 26 through April 29, 2001 at the Golden Gateway Holiday Inn in San Francisco. There is a brand new leadership for the event and I'm pleased to announce that former PPOC president Patti [REDACTED] will be the new event administrator. Patti has already gone to work and is assembling her team as this is written. Long-time group friend and favorite jewelry lady Jeani Adams has already signed on to Patti's team. Hopefully this will squelch any gossip circulating on the rumor mill about the demise of our annual event. As I stated last month there is no truth that the event being switched to a February time frame.

CALIFORNIA DREAMIN' 2000

What a weekend! San Francisco has to be a transgendered person's dream come true. Its truly an amazing city and can't be duplicated for its cultural diversity and openness to varied lifestyles. The event came off without a hitch - well almost without a hitch. There were some technical problems with our meeting rooms being changed on us on a daily basis, but all in all, nothing in the way of a major problem ever surfaced. The hotel staff person assigned to our event was brand new to the job so the majority of the switching had to be due to her inexperience.

One of the major highlights was the Thursday evening optional excursion to the Club Fugazi Theatre in North Beach where our guests were treated to a rousing performance of America's longest running musical revue, Beach Blanket Babylon. The Saturday night pub crawl, headed up by TGSF San Francisco's own D'arcy Leopard, hit a potpourri of watering holes including the Top O' The Mark Lounge at the Mark Hopkins Hotel. Eat your heart out Big Apple. While picking up the tickets at the will-call window on the day of the performance yours truly found the neatest Irish pub a few doors down from the theatre. Naturally I had to check it out. My late mother was 100% Irish and she would never have forgiven me if I didn't. Good place to eat and drink, and no, you can't take the Irish wolfhound home with you. I tried but to no avail.

The lovely but shadowy Juana [REDACTED] put together a brief but interesting selection of workshops that covered the gamut from "Why?" to "How To," along with a unique workshop presented by her hubby entitled "Waning Interest." The workshops were all well received by the participants. Super Couple Donna and Julie [REDACTED] organized an impromptu couples panel discussion and Thank them for their interest and endeavors on behalf of the event. The quintessential Becky and Loy of the RGA group in San Jose were again ever the omnipresent and faithful duo by doing everything from registration to hosting the Friday night dinner.

Leslie [REDACTED], newly retired from the TGSF presidency, did all of the work in organizing the optional excursions and did an outstanding job in arranging for the lighting, sound, and talent for our Saturday night banquet. Great job.

Our vendor mall was filled to capacity and everything from jewelry, clothing, breast forms, V-strings (if you don't what these are just ask and I'll tell you), make overs, to books and magazines was offered to the convention attendees. I'm happy to report we didn't experience any dissatisfaction, rebellions, petitions, or hate and discontent this event. Then again, one of our staunchest regulars wasn't on hand this year. Could this be just a coincidence? Hmm.

A number of the IFGE board of directors were in attendance led by newly-elected chair Julie Ann Johnson and executive director Nancy Cain. Julie and Nancy met with some local leaders and gave their rendition of the new IFGE which was well received.

The major highlight of the event had to be the presence of Rebecca Prozan, assistant to his honor, Mayor Willie Brown, who honored the California Dreamin' event at our Saturday keynote luncheon by presenting a mayoral proclamation making April 28, 2000, Transgender Awareness Day in San Francisco. A copy of the proclamation in its entirety appears elsewhere in this newsletter. Check it out. To the best of my knowledge I don't know whether another transgender event has been so honored by a municipalities top political officer. It makes a girl proud.

FAN MAIL

Hello,

I attended the Cal Dreamin' in S.F., I just wanted to send a note of appreciation to you for putting it on. During the con, and through some conversations I became more aware of what you actually do to hold one, I was even more impressed. I don't speak for everyone certainly, but I hope you do know how great something like this is for "us". Thank you so much for your efforts.

Michelle [REDACTED]

Transgender Awareness Day in San Francisco!

POINT

It's good to be a man

By GRAHAM HICKS – Edmonton Sun

A five-day trip requires only one suitcase.

We open our own jars.

We make decisions without a support group.

We get extra credit for the smallest act of thoughtfulness ... like actually buying and wrapping a present.

Wedding plans take care of themselves.

If someone forgets to invite us to something, they can still be our friend.

Underwear is $10 a three-pack.

Three pairs of shoes are more than adequate.

Grey hair and wrinkles only add character.

Your pals will never trap you with: "So, notice anything different?"

The same hairstyle lasts for decades.

No shaving below the neck.

A few belches are expected. And tolerated.

A wallet, belt, shoes - one colour, all seasons.

We trim our nails with a pocketknife.

COUNTERPOINT

All I needed to know about life I learned from my girlfriends

Good times are even better when they're shared..

A good long talk can cure almost anything.

Everyone needs someone with whom to share their secrets.

Listening is just as important as talking.

An understanding friend is better than a therapist; and cheaper too!*

Laughter makes the world a happier place.

Friends are like wine; they get better with age.

Sometimes you just need a shoulder to cry on.

Great minds think alike, especially when they are female!

When it comes to "bonding," females do it better.

You are never too old for a slumber party!

Girls just want to have F U N!

It is important to make time to do "girl things."

Calories don't count when you are having lunch (or any other food) with your girlfriends

You can never have too many shoes.

A gem may be precious, but Friendship is PRICELESS.
