LETTERS

Dear Cathy,

I'm sending along the photos I promised you that day I spoke to you on the phone from Mike Salem's. When I received a letter recently from Terry Cole -- whom I had run into quite by accident, as you may remember -- I suddenly realized that two months have flown by. I could hardly believe it. Anyway I'm flattered you asked for them and I'm eagerly looking forward to seeing them published in THE TRANSVESTITE.

In your newsletter you asked what could be done about girls who say they'll answer all, but don't. One thing that could be done is to kick any such advertiser out of the Empathy Club after 2 verified complaints. Another alternative would be simply to prohibit the use of such language in any ad.

On the other side of the girdle, I happen to be a girl who does answer all mail, even if it kills me (and sometimes it damn near does). I've got a few complaints about respondents to ads I want to get off my bra:

First are the eager beavers who send a phone number and little else, not even a return address. If a prospective friend is close enough to meet, I'd like to know a little more about her before we do. One respondent just sent a card with a phone number, wanting me to call him, collect, right away, because he liked my ad and picture. Flattering, but hardly an overwhelming inducement.

Which brings on the second group; the writer of mystery messages. The information they provide about themselves is so minimal that you're forced to write a letter to find out what their interests are. Their letters usually read, "I saw your ad and photo and I'd like to _____ you." (Insert whatever word you like in the blank.) To these I usually send a "thanks but no thanks" reply.

I happen to work in the advertising business. From professional experience I can say that a lot of girls would enjoy much more success in answering ads if they'd think before they write. What is there about you that's interesting and attractive enough to make the advertiser want to get to know you? What need does she seem to have that you can fill? Not, "I think you're beautiful so write to me." (Already I can envision a tide of mail saying, "Here's why it's worth your while to write to me. I think you're cute, so write soon.")

The third -- and alas! -- the longest group are those who enclosed neither a photo nor a SASE. In my ad I specifically ask for a photo. I might as well have asked for a U.S. Savings Bond, as far as some correspondents are concerned. They either act as if they never read the ad or excuse themselves by implying that their last available photo was eaten in one gulp by their living Bra. These I answer too, but I'd like to dump them into File 13.

I didn't require an SASE in my ad, but I could kiss the few who have been thoughtful enough to enclose one. After a while this becomes quite expensive. I wouldn't really mind it so much if so much of it wasn't being spent to say, "thanks but no thanks" to respondents like those I've described. From my own experience in answering ads, I find response is about double when I enclose an SASE than when I don't. So now I always enclose both a photo and an SASE.

Sorry to bitch on so. Must be that time of the month for me. As I told you on the phone, your correspondence service is really super fantastic. It's the interesting, kind, considerate girls (and boys) I've gotten to know and like who make the others tolerable.

Love,

Christie (EC-1174)

Hi Cathy,

Cathy, I just love to dress and be a girl. I dress every chance I get. I have a fair figure with the help of a padded girdle, waist cincher and a long-line bra. The real problem I have is with make-up. My face is rough and that's the biggest reason I don't go out in public. The pictures I've sent you don't really show how rough my face is. I would just love to go out in public dressed all the way. I did once on Halloween and loved it, and have gone out at night.

I could sure use some help with make-up. In fact, all the help I could get! Maybe someday through the club I will get the help I so badly need.

I don't have any problem getting the clothing I want. I send out to get bras, girdles, cinchers. There is a place here in Detroit where you can get anything you want. The name of the place is "Tina-Marie" at 34 West Grand River, Detroit, Michigan 48226. You can go to the store and buy the things you want or order from their catalog. Their prices are right and if you order from their catalog there is no long delay. I'm sure this will help out some of the sisters who are afraid to buy in a women's clothing store.

Well, I guess I'll close for now. Keep up the good work and you may do with these pictures whatever way you choose.

Love,

Bonnie (EC-1320)
(Michigan)

Dear Cathy,

If I may I would like to tell others what I have found to be the only beard cover. It is "Recover" facial blemish cream. It may be obtained by writing Commerce Drug Co., Inc. Del Laboratories Inc., Farmington, N.Y. 11735.

Recover costs about $2.00 per two ounce tube, which lasts over fifty applications. It has a rubber-type base and is not affected by water. You can swim in it, yet perspiration will easily bead out and not streak make-up. I wore this as a base to a professional cosmetologist make-up session and was complimented on the professional effect.

The way I use Recover is to spread it liberally all over the beard area, blending in over the eyes and eyebrows. I then use Pan Stick or Merle Norman color base, covering the entire face. I then pat on loose powder either translucent or a color of your choice. Over this comes blusher, cheek highlighter or rouge.

I think I have from normal to heavy beard and find this procedure adequately covers mine. Enclosed is a picture to let you see the end result.

Sincerely,

Denise (EC-997)
(Connecticut)

Dear Cathy,

I'd like to write this to the rest of the girls. I'm wondering if anyone out there knows of any method or preparation for keeping these artificial hair wigs from becoming so badly snarled. Perhaps I'm not combing it enough. I know I'm not the only one who has this problem and perhaps some very ingenious girl has the answer. How about it?

I certainly envy all you girls out there who can enjoy so many parties. I presume Empathy Club had a nice get-together for Christmas and for New Years. I know there must be more TVs here in the C-U area, but they must be very quiet. I'd like to hear from anybody.

Again, Cathy, keep up your good work, and enjoy your parties.

Sincerely,

Winnie (EC-648)
(Illinois)

Dear Cathy,

Enclosed are a couple of photos I recently took and you are more than welcome to use them in any of your publications as you find appropriate. I enjoy dressing and shopping for clothes that I enjoy wearing while dressed in my feminine finery.

Please keep up with your excellent work and publications as we girls need a leader like you to help us explore our inner needs and desires and to put ourselves in the right image before the inquisitive public eye.

If you desire to use any of my pictures, please advise all the girls I'll be glad to been lifted from my shoulders. Most of all I think I can thank all of you who publish TV magazines for giving me the courage and strength to tell anyone.

Thanking you all.

Love,

Alice (EC-1300)
(Alabama)

Dear Cathy,

Are there any "true-life accounts of the emotional and psychological turmoil of those of us who find ourselves with a man's desires yet who also feel as though we are women trapped in men's bodies? I don't have my life to live over, but I would like to understand myself better and live this life more fully and meaningfully. Mine is at least a double loneliness; I need friends like you, dear, and I need women friends who at least sympathize if not empathize. I know if I were a woman physiologically I'd be a lesbian but male homosexuality doesn't seem to attract me sufficiently to become involved. Just what, then, is left? This problem has tormented me for many years. I'm in my late thirties, I've tried marriage twice and both times it's been a total disaster because I realized I wanted to be the domestic one, to stay at home and take care of the house, do all the womanly activities, and -- yes -- bear children. Though I never can have children, I want to love and be loved as a woman, but I don't like the idea of having my body hacked into a miserable mocking semblance of a woman's just to look like without becoming a real woman.

Darling, you are the first person I've ever felt safe in confiding in. I want to be content dressing femme and being with sisters like you and with women who love TV's.

Psycho-therapists seem hung up in the myopic idea that such feelings and needs are something to be "gotten over" rather than understood and given status. My belief is that the desires of the individual are the expression of his natural individual self. Of course, this can be easily passed over as rationalization, but I love to wear pretty and dainty feminine clothing and I don't feel really dressed without a pair of panties and nylons or panty-hose on under my business suit.

I dislike most of the "mannish" jokes some men seem to find essential to tell in write them, with priority to those who desire to exchange photos.

Thank you for the kind and prompt service you have always provided.

Affectionately,

Darlene (EC-1313)
(Kentucky)

Dear Cathy,

I just had to write and tell you I had a little talk with my father this afternoon. I really hadn't planned to tell him about me but as the truth unfolded, he didn't explode like I expected him to. Matter of fact, he said he could accept me anyway I wanted to be if I didn't hurt anyone.

The conversation came from a variety of factors. My brother had recently told him I'd gotten a package from Fredricks of Hollywood. My father had told him to forget it but this afternoon in the car, dear little brother was trying to blackmail me into telling him what was in a letter we'd picked up at the post office.

The other thing was related. In reading the November issue of FORUM, I'd come across an article on transsexuals. I had noticed a mention of Klinefelter's Syndrome, which I knew I was being treated for. What it was had never been explained to me. I noticed another term or two I had seen on my chart at the doctor's and I decided to ask my father why this had been kept from me.

It turned out that my doctor never bothered to explain it to him further than saying I had an extra female chromosome.

My secret was revealed to him by that time. Now it feels like a great weight has order to keep up some weird image of masculine virility. God!

I'm disenchanted with all the Christian messages I've heard so far, because none of them consider our feminine desires as normal or even as worthy of mention. Oh, I know there are "gay" churches, but I'm not gay. I might be, at least temporarily, happier if I were, but I am just feminine, not gay. Looking at you as a man looking at a woman, I find you lovely, and could embrace you and kiss you warmly, but I desire to do this even as a sister to a sister. That's how you appeal to me, dear. Does any of this make any kind of sense to you?

Mainly, sweet Cathy, I'm writing out of loneliness for the companionable friendship of someone like you. Sometimes I feel like Harry Holler in Hermann Hesse's STEPPENWOLF.

All my feelings and sensibilities yearn toward feminine expression in decorating the home -- though I am a lazy and inconsistent maid as far as picking up and cleaning -- but I love to plan and choose with lovely pictures and furniture, sculpture and such.

Oh, Cathy, what am I to do with the rest of my life? I don't want to find myself in a few years alone and totally unfulfilled and dissatisfied. As Homer and Jethro call it, "Too old for castor oil and too young for Serutan." Well! At least I'm smiling again. God has graced me with a fairly good sense of humor, even if with a confused set of glands. He's given me a Catholic taste in Art and Music, too, but even with a whole world of intellectual, aesthetic and philosophical pursuits to enjoy, there is a need in my heart to fulfill myself as the woman I really am by nature, the woman I long to be in every moment of my life.

There are times when I feel my life is an unfortunate joke in very poor taste. Other times it is lovely, and the knowledge of friends like you, dear, make life so much more bearable.

I don't ask for confidences in return. Cathy, but I must tell you I appreciate your friendship and kindly attentive ear. How I wish I had met you several years ago, so I could have helped with the Empathy Club.

My three "children", Margaret Rose - Gretel Rose, and Flash, cats, are demanding their 10 PM meal. How easy it is to over-indulge them, but they are a very real and precious presence in my little duplex and without them I'd be totally alone. If ever I have to be reincarnated as anything other than a woman, I'd like to be a cat, though I'd be, like Gretel Rose, a shameless hus-sy.

Oh, darling Cathy, please write soon. God bless you and prosper you in your business, keep you safe and well, and grant you happiness in your life.

Love, your friend and sister,

Joanne (California)

Dear Cathy,

Just a brief word about an experience I recently had: I went to a women's apparel shop and told the clerk I'd been invited to a masquerade party and was considering going as a woman. She was very anxious to help and even got out a bra for me to try on with some dresses. Then she told me of a local college student who had been in earlier this fall with a list of items for his fraternity. He said he would be re-imbursed for the cost if he modeled the outfit but would have to pay for it himself if he didn't go through with it. She said the list included "everything"; panties, bra, girdle, slip, hose, dress. And of course he had to try on everything while he was at the store to make sure it fit since he was to be a "model". The clerk seemed to have gotten a big kick out of helping him and seemed very sympathetic toward the whole idea.

Looking forward to the next issue which I hope will be out soon.

Sincerely,

Dave (EC-1382)

Dear Cathy,

I am hoping someone will help with some advice. I am a member, my code number is EC-488 and named Juanita. I am 32 years of age and 6'2", very muscular with broad shoulders. I have been a transvestite since 1969 and enjoy dressing. But I feel that I have more a foot fetish because I just love manicuring my toe nails and wearing women's shoes. I change colors often and keep my toe nails polished all the time. I can relate to this because any woman with beautifully manicured toe nails and finger nails just really turns me on, and I enjoy watching women's feet so much when they are wearing shoes with heel and toe out with polished toe nails. Yes I know I have a problem, but this is a minor one and I can handle it.

To get to more serious problems of my transvestite desires; some so-called friends and others are calling me a big sissy and I really don't like it, but I really don't think there is anything I can do about it at present. I live in a four unit apartment and everyone knows about me. The one young girl whom I thought I could trust and be friends with turned out to be all wrong. I gave her several books on transvestism to read and I explained myself as a man who enjoyed dressing in the opposite sex's clothes and she has also been here in my apartment while I've been dressed and has always complimented me on how nice I look.

Since then several things have happened, to let me know that I made a mistake in taking her into my confidence. Akron is a small town and gossip travels like brush fire. I work in a restaurant as a night porter and even there they act like I am a stranger. I go to an adult school in the hopes of finishing two years of high school to get my G. E. D. I would like to go to college if possible and major in fashion design. They had been calling me sissy behind my back at school but I am there to get an education, and I know I am right about this because of some of the things I have heard and their actions.

Well, this young lady at the restaurant wanted to go to school, so I got all the information and she started classes. Someone told her I was a sissy and where she was once very friendly, now she acts like I am a stranger. I could go on and on with situations like that. I don't want to quit my job because I am saving my money in the hopes of going somewhere to gain a little self-respect and peace of mind. I know that all known transvestites have it rough and I am looking for a city or state where I can just live and dress without people looking down on me. I realize my size is a problem because I look like a football player. All I seek is companionship and the pursuit of happiness and to be left alone. Cathy, if they were to call me what I am, a transvestite, I would feel better. I want to tell them all that I am a heterosexual transvestite and not a sissy. How am I supposed to handle this situation?

My wife of eight years has been gone about a year, but I still continue to see her for sexual reasons. The reason she left is because she said I was dressing too often and was neglecting her for me (Juanita). I don't know why or too much understand why she accepted it in the beginning, but I know for a fact she did love me once upon a time.

I have long accepted what I am and I am able to live with it. But how do I solve the problem of people calling me "a Big Sissy"?

I want to thank you very much, Cathy, for running my photo in the back of every issue along with the other girls. For the record, enclosed is a more up to date picture, I hope you like it. Cathy, I need help.

Love,

Juanita (EC-488) Ohio

Dear Juanita,

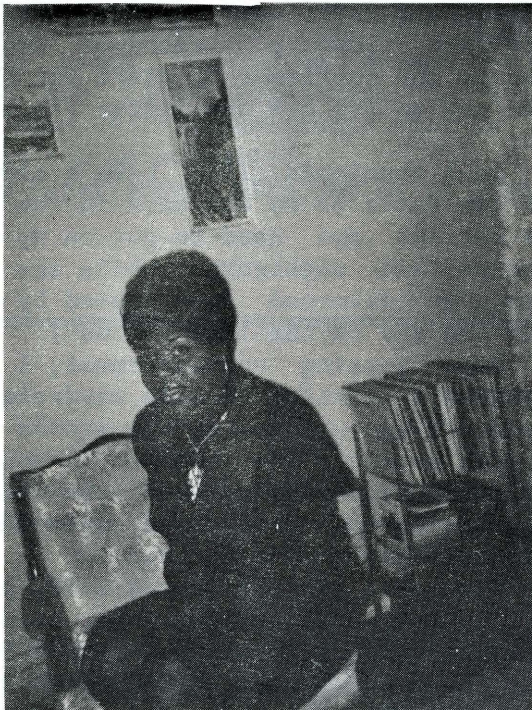

I hope you don't mind my answering this instead of Cathy. I'm Jessie Collins, -- Cathy's part time assistant editor and bitchy flirt. (Not really, or I hope not!) You sound in a very down way and I hope a lot of readers will take advantage of the Empathy Club to write to you. (How about it girls? A letter can do a lot to cheer someone up, and you can see Juanita is sincere.) Foot fetishism is fairly common and maybe you can find some pen pals with similar interests. It is also next to impossible that there would not be several other transvestites in Akron, so I especially hope someone from your area sees this and gets in touch.

Your main difficulty, I think, is over sensitivity. Although I am generally well accepted by family and friends, it is only natural that some people -- who are just prone to gossip -- are bound to say things behind my back, and it's bound to get back to me eventually, but I'm not much bothered by it. I don't pay attention to the few who call me derisive names, for such inconsiderate people are only showing their narrowness and ignorance, and their opinions don't matter at all.

I do find it difficult to believe the one girl you took into confidence managed to get the word spread all through Akron, tho'. I live in a town so small it isn't even on the map, but with wars and gas shortages and corrupt politicians, I'm afraid I rank rather low on the agenda of conversation. If people refer to you as "sissy" it may be due to some mannerism that you don't realize but is obvious to others. I don't think being a sissy is a terrible thing, really, but if it bothers you, you could make a better effort to express your man-self as well as you do your girl-self. And if people treat you like a stranger, perhaps that's because you are too shy because of self-consciousness and you have been treating others like they were strangers, too.

My best advice (and maybe others will offer better) would be to show others kindness and understanding, even if they are bigotted against your sexuality, and to be honest with people who show an interest in you, even though casual and even intimate friends aren't always discreet. If people react to honesty, kindness and understanding with anything but returned honesty, kindness and understanding, then such people obviously suffer personality defects far worse than any you or I suffer. They need your understanding, too, but they probably don't deserve your friendship.

Yours,

Jessie Collins

Dear Cathy,

Here is that story of the $300.00 spending spree.

But first I just want to say that the annual is all you said it would be.

You and Gloria, look ravishing and Pamela Nolan is as beautiful as ever.

I wrote her, and received a speedy reply on make-up. She also sent me a lovely picture too.

And last but not least, I am glad to see Julie is back!

And now:

THE $300.00 SPREE

I really did not have any intentions spending $300.00; more likely $100.00 or $150.00. Now I understand how it feels to buy like a girl (even tho' I did this as a man buying for his make-believe wife) - wow it's wonderful! If I were to go on to many of these sprees I would go broke.

Now keep in mind that I did this 2 to 3 weeks prior to Christmas. The time when everyone is buying everything and anything - the time a TV can buy without very much embarrassment.

The 1st week I would start on cosmetics.

So I went to a variety store that carried a large selection of cosmetics. The department would have to be kind of tucked away so I would not feel like the whole store was watching me.

First, I just browsed around so I could see what they had and to get the attention of the youngest salesgirl. It wasn't long and this pretty and young salesgirl came over.

"Can I help you?" she said.

"Yes," I said, "I'd like to make a complete beauty kit for my wife this Christmas."

She quickly replied, "That's a good idea. She will love that."

I told her I did not have much money with me right now, but could come back tomorrow and that I just needed some help picking out what she uses.

So we started on eye make-up. Within a few minutes I had my eye shadow and mascara.

"I think that I will buy this now. But let's continue looking for the rest," I replied.

I soon found out that this girl was the buyer of the department. This is good; she would know exactly what (my makebelieve) wife would like best.

I walked out of the store with $8.10 of eye make-up and a question of what shade or contrast of foundation should I get tomorrow.

The next day I went back and she helped me to find creme foundation in Glo-Rachel a beige and Purely Pink, a lip brush, and 3 lipsticks. I picked out Jelly Roll Pink, Snow Canyon Coral, and Blue Flame Red (WOW, I love wearing them all). To continue, we picked a finger nail toughener and 3 lovely nail polishes: Amber, Fuchsia Shock and Snow Lilac. All the lipsticks and nail polishes by Revlon. All to match.

Then we picked out a Erace stick; color, fair, for covering around the eyes, and a face powder puff. Spray cologne called April Violets, when put on lightly makes me go wild! Again to continue, I got a creme rouge, color; Blondeen, and Corn Silk with no color. This part came to $27.00. I change it.

So far, I have not broken my limit. I'll look forward to doing it again next year.

During the second week I found a per-holiday sales on shoes. To start with I picked up a pair of 2" high heels Black leather and at another store a pair of girls casual Brown laced shoes.

Next I got (now get this) "I can't believe it's a girdle", long leg. Oh is it comfortable! And with that a bra 36B, tan flowered and padded, PJ'S nylon; color, Violet and another Pink.

Near the end of the week I thought it is time to pick out a new wig. After visiting a score of stores and wig shops I found it. A wig called "Free Play", a frost, a blend of blond a lighter blond and light brown. It's a wavy, pepped up, behind the ears and high on the head.

The last week and the freest for a Transvestite. To show you what a shy TV can buy, I picked up the following: Panty hose in white, navy, rust (a red), and sheer jet black. Scarfs in navy, white, black. White gloves and brown and a black leather pairs of gloves. Beautiful and fitting white, nylon blouse. Corduroy flare pants in navy blue. Gold like bracelets and silver ones too. Earrings, rings, and pins.

If there had been 1 or 2 weeks more I and my very feminine half would be broke. So I said STOP and that ought to make Jeanette happy with what we bought.

Now as the feminine mood flows into me and chance comes before the mirror and the many pictures I take (to improve on the realism of Jeanette) a woman appears.

The End of just a beginning

Next year may be I'll leave the Male half at home. I am working very hard on getting out of the closet.

Yours truly,

Jeanette (EC-1169)

Dear Cathy,

Enclosed please find membership application and fee.

Well, I've finally done it and I must say I feel somewhat relieved having been a closet TV for some ten years.

You are to be congratulated on such a herculean task, well done. It certainly must have taken a tremendous amount of courage and fortitude to start the Empathy Club and we TVs are the better for it, and you.

As I mentioned I've been a closet TV for ten years or so and back in the 60's I was married and used to put on my wife's panties and nightgowns while she was at work. We divorced (not caused by my TV-just the end of the line for us).

Upon getting an apartment, I slowly attained a limited female wardrobe - and would "dress-up" and go out around 1 A.M. to walk around a few blocks. A wonderful feeling - especially when the wind was blowing strong and would cause the full skirt to whip around my legs.

I enjoyed wearing garter belt, panties long nylons, 2½" heels, wig, blouse and sleeping in a slip. I neglected to mention the bra. I take a 38B padded but because I'm chubby i have some breast development that helped to fill the bra. Even without a bra but wearing a tight dress they made a good showing.

I especially liked rainy weather and late fall, winter, early spring because then people would not be on their porches. So, tho' it was cold and or rainy I felt more secure plus the early hour. I have nice legs, according to the girl friends I had, and many times received complimentary whistles from passing cars. "The girl friends were not aware of my TV desires."

Note, I mentioned used to, this is because I had to move out of my apt. due to undesireables moving in after a change in landlords. These people were drug addicts and alcoholics and broke into my apartment.

I now have a fine room with a nice family and tho' my possessions are safe I rarely "dress" and only have a few panties, wig, garter belt, stockings and two bathing suits with separate pants, these on me, are my mini dress. Hopefully in the near future I'll once again have my own place. Till that time I have to settle for my make shift minis a couple of times a week.

Cathy, it's wonderful to be able to write about my TVism in confidence because I have little outlet. My girl friends wouldn't understand, though many times I feel like telling them when they massage my breasts in love making. I have one who enjoys my breasts very much but feels it's OK since I'm male. Yet she made negative remarks about TVs we've passed on the street and feels lesbianism is a fate worse than death (consciously that is, but perhaps sub-consciously).

My experiences with males is limited to a couple of meetings while dressed walking the streets in the A. M.

At which time I stated I was male, although they could tell that again it was stated I had nice legs and it amounted to fellatio.

I fantasize about being a male's date for the evening ... music, a glass or two (no more) of wine, love-making, the date bit.

I enjoy French with girls (real) and have met a few who enjoy Gr. also, at which time I think to my myself "why not me". Oh, well, maybe someday or night.

To me the actuality of the date fantasy would be the frosting on the cake.

Enough of that.

Could you tell me what states besides California allow TVs on the streets without hassling?

At this time I do not have any pictures of me dressed due to rooming - tho' I am acquainted with the B/W developing process. Perhaps soon.

Close for now,

The Feminist Society's Ball

A photo-story by Sally Anne Douglas (Social Director - The Salmacis Society.)

What is your fantasy? Have you always dreamed of being able to get dressed in high drag, and then have your girl friend pick you up and take you to a lovely hotel where the food and drink were marvelous; where you could dine and dance among other compatible she-males and their female dates?

Well, you need dream no more. The Salmacis Society has functions like this regularly. All you need to do is get a date and a ticket; and the scene is yours!

The Salmacis Society is the one, unique Social Society that specializes in bringing she-males openly together with bi-sexual and feminist women. Gone are the days of clandestine meetings in dingy motel rooms. Single people, of both sexes, who like to be with other feminine people, now meet openly through the auspices of the Society. Regular functions, held in well known restaurants and bars, encourage the shy ones, of both sexes, to come out and be met. As a result, the Salmacis Society is one of the most rapidly growing co-operative social societies in the nation.

This last Spring, the Society arranged a Gala Spring Ball for its members and their guests. The event consisted of several parts, each leading to the next. The evening began with no-host cocktails, in a charming setting reminiscent of the Mediterranean; cocktails were followed by an excellent catered dinner, which consisted of relished, a choice of three entrees, salad, desert and coffee. Following dinner, a four-part Polynesian dance sequence was given by Kalani, Shawn, and Jadie (who was runner-up queen of the Miss Cotillion contest). And finally, there was dancing to a live band 'til 2:00.

The dance occurred at a restaurant hotel in the Western section of San Francisco; and was attended by people from all over the State. Represented were couples from as far south as San Diego, and as far north as Eureka.

The photos you see displayed here are representative scenes from the ball. In these photos, you see the unique mixture of she-males, females and males that is the signature of all Salmacis events. The Salmacis Society welcomes all feminists, without prejudice. There is no sexual, religious, or color bar; so you see a great mixture of people. The thing they all have in common is a desire to be with other feminine people.

In these photos, notice girls of both sexes: socializing, eating, drinking, and dancing together. The women are a mixture of wives, girl friends and single, swinging, bi and gay women from all over the State of California. The she-males (male-girls, drag-queens, TVs, TSs) were all sexual persuasions. Some came with male escorts; some with female escorts.

A lively time was had by all.

The San Francisco chapter of Salmacis is the Charter Chapter, and the hub of all Salmacis activities. San Francisco events are many and numerous. The San Francisco section pioneered the concept of fem-femme social events; and the concept proved so popular, that other chapters have been started in other metropolitan areas of the US and several foreign countries.

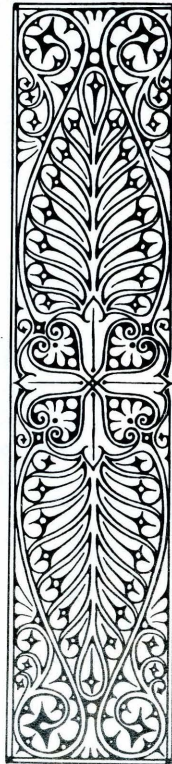

If you are interested in knowing more about the Social Society for Feminists of all sexes, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to this magazine.

All about PIERCED Ears

Written By: Jessie Collins

It's amazing how fears are overcome when someone honestly wants something badly enough. I have always been deadly afraid of needles, and yet when it comes time for my hormone injection, I'm right on time. Surgery scares everybody, but what true transsexual wouldn't go through a sex change operation if only it were financially possible?

To one extent or another, every cross dresser must overcome fears: fear of being thought 'strange' when you buy women's underclothing, the fear of being recognized, pointed at, discovered. Fear of rejection.

But if you want, if you really want, to own those under garments or to go somewhere dressed or to meet people, then you defy your fears and buy what you please, step through that door, and even risk rejection.

And after a while, you're no longer afraid.

What I wanted was rather simple: my ears pierced. What I feared was obvious: the needle they punch through the ear lobe. Other TVs have other things to take into consideration, mainly how they can go around twenty four hours a day for five solid weeks without once taking the earrings out! It takes that long for the hole to properly heal. For me that was no problem since I'm a girl more often than I'm a guy anyway. So it was only the fear of that needle that made me put it off and put it off. The needle is a couple inches long and fits into a special punch that works somewhat like a sewing machine needle and looks a bit like fancy pair of pliers or perhaps a surgeon's tool. It looks pretty scary, that's for sure.

But I kept losing my earrings and it was quite frustrating, as some of them were unreasonably expensive, and my collection of unmatched specimens seemed to grow larger each week. It also seemed like the best earrings were made for pierced ears, the largest selection was always for pierced. Some clip-ons were designed to imitate the pierced look, but it's never a perfect imitation. And lastly, wearing clamp earrings or screw-type all day long can actually be a little painful after a few hours.

So eventually I went into a shop where they sold pierced earrings and did ear piercing Monday and Tuesday mornings. I made an appointment for the next Tuesday. For a couple days, I stewed and stammered, fretting about the impending pain.

I asked a girl friend whose ears were pierced if it hurt. She said no, you couldn't feel a thing. But I wasn't convinced. A cousin of mine pierced her own ears even though she didn't know anything about it, and she also assured me it didn't hurt hardly at all. I doubted she was telling the truth. I asked my aunt, who never had hers pierced, and she said she imagined it would hurt quite a bit. Her I believed.

Nonetheless, Tuesday morning found me right on time for my appointment. There was no charge for having the holes made if you just bought a good pair of earrings to have "installed". So I looked over the many choices.

If you ever decide to have your ears pierced, be sure to choose something simple to start with. After all, you can't take them out for five full weeks, so you need a pair that will go with almost anything you wear. You must also take into consideration that the earrings have to be turned everyday to keep the skin from healing onto the post, so it can't be a dangling kind that can't be turned over in the hole. It has to be a post instead of a wire to assure a nice straight hole through the lobe. A small gold ball is undoubtedly the best all round earring for the first five weeks. It will go equally well with evening dresses or casual wear, and it's the easiest to twirl around each day to keep from sticking.

So, having chosen a small gold ball, I was soon sitting in a chair, my chosen earrings put into antiseptic alcohol along with the (dread) needles beside me, while the girl prepared to poke holes in me.

While I held my hair back, she pinched both lobes so that the blood would be squeezed away from where she intended to make the holes, then she rubbed the spots with alcohol which lowered the temperature of the area. I've heard some people use ice, but the alcohol is apparently sufficient. Carefully, she marked each ear with a small black dot to guide her in getting the holes located correctly.

Then she put the needle in the pliers or punch or whatever you'd call it while I held my breath, trying to relax but not succeeding too well. I closed my eyes.

I didn't feel a thing.

She hadn't done it yet was why.

Then I felt it. It didn't hurt really, but it sounded just awful. That thing crunching and oozing through my ear, oh, the sound of it was terrible.

"Are you going to faint?" the girl asked, worried.

"That didn't hurt did it?"

"Not at all."

She had made the hole and it was bleeding a little, but she caught all the blood in a small cotton ball. Taking the gold post from the alcohol, she put it through my ear and attached the back so that one side was all set. She held the cotton ball there a few seconds until it completely ceased to bleed then tried to manipulate the cotton ball so I wouldn't see it before she dropped it in a little garbage box. But I saw it anyway, and there really wasn't much blood at all!

The second time wasn't so bad. I was prepared, so the horrible sound of the needle pushing through my lobe with a "gush" didn't seem nearly as loud as the first time. She had changed needles to make sure it was still sterilized to make the second hole and, perhaps because I was calmer and my heart not beating so fast, it didn't bleed even a little. After the girl attached the second earring properly and rubbed the front and back with a little more alcohol, it was all over.

She explained then how to take care of the pierce until it healed into a permanent hole. Once a day I had to clean around the earring, front and back, with a cotton ball soaked in rubbing alcohol to insure against infection. But I was warned against drenching the ear in alcohol more than once a day or else it might slow down the hearing process. The earring must not be removed, but every morning when it was cleaned with an alcohol-soaked cotton ball, she explained, I should turn the ball around two or three times.

I made the mistake of being impatient and tried to put different earrings in before the whole five weeks were up. All I succeeded in doing was to start one pierce bleeding a little, so I had to start the five weeks over. It wasn't a very smart thing to do.

In most cases, the hole should be permanent after five weeks. Occasionally holes close up if not used fairly regularly for the first year, but usually the hole will never have to be remade. The hole can get dirt in it which conceivably could cause infection, so a couple times a week the pierced areas will have to be rubbed with alcohol and the parts of earrings that go through the ear must be cleaned in alcohol before each wearing. Never under any circumstances should dirty or tarnished earrings be worn. The chance of infection isn't really that great, but it only takes once and the hole will have to be treated as any other soar until it heals up, in which case the piercing would have to be done all over again.

You shouldn't put anything in the earlobe but gold posts and wires, as cheap wires may have impurities that will tarnish or rust. Buying only quality gold earrings could be expensive, and often the cheaper brands are the more attractive or stylish. What you can do then, is use a good quality gold wire that goes through the ear. This way you can build a large collection of earrings without so much expense and still not risk infection from cheap and harmful material going in the pierces.

Once the hole is permanent, after that first five weeks, a part time TV need not worry anymore about having to wear them all day everyday. Initially, you must be prepared to wear them constantly, but after that time period, they can be worn occasionally if it better suits your life style. You needn't worry much about the hole showing, for unless you wear heavy earrings that will stretch the hole a little, the hole is really too small to notice.

For the more-than-less full time cross dresser like me, or for someone at least not secretive about such predilections, having one's ears pierced is not something that should be put off longer.

DO YOU HAVE A PROBLEM OR QUESTION CONCERNING TRANSVESTISM? GLORIA WILL HELP YOU PERSONALLY THROUGH HER COLUMN. WRITE HER TODAY, Dear Gloria,
C/O Empathy Club, Box 12466, Seattle, Washington 98111

Hi GIRLS:

Hi Girls, Gloria here.

I had a letter recently from a member of the club with a plaintiff cry for help. As it is a problem which is so very common to many TVs I thought I would discuss it at length.

Briefly the member had said that he had been a very active TV until a year ago, when he met and married a wonderful girl and had given up all his TV activities. Now the old feelings had emerged from hibernation. He did not want to tell his wife in case it put an end to his marriage, but he was getting to be impossible to live with due to his frustrations and ragged nerves from fighting the urges.

To heterosexual TVs this is a problem which all have to face. It is usually faced the wrong way which is the easiest way, such as making a vow to give it up. Starting a new life, convincing oneself that it is not necessary anymore, rationalizing oneself out of it, etc.

The problem is that TVism is not a habit like smoking, and goodness knows that is hard enough to put aside. The desire to cross dress is a basic emotion, inbred or acquired, but still a basic emotion in nearly every case. Like a sense of humor or temper, it cannot be changed. However, it can be controlled and lived with. That is what we all have to do. No one can achieve the ideal fantasy or dream state they desire with their cross-dressing, it is all a compromise, to achieve a condition of acceptance of limitations and learn to live with it.

Now the letter writer asks me how to handle the situation, how can he tell his wife? Well my first instinct is to say, "don't start from here". It is easier to do this before marriage of course. If one can realize early that the TV urge will never go away, then there comes a time when the girl has to be acquainted with this "Thing you have". If she is going to accept this, an understanding must be arrived at before marriage as to the role it plays in your life, happiness and limitations. After marriage most women change their ideas and try to rebuild a husband, but if an understanding was arrived at first, the husband always has that defense. If the girl cannot accept the fact, cannot see the relationship to her future happiness, then it is easier to break with a girl friend than a wife.

However, the respondent is married and wants help. So I can only say that the subject has to be broached if he cannot live with the existing State of Affairs. How to do it is something else again as it all depends upon the woman, her emotional state, her level of acceptance of change, her acceptance of life's changing standards and patterns, her background and environment, etc. How the man brings up the subject is also important.

A simple way to do so maybe to see a female impersonator show. Study her reactions. If favorable, then the subject can be discussed, and if progress is made, a confession of having deep feelings of ones own to cross-dress can be made. If a female impersonator show is not possible, then watch the Flip Wilson show together. It is a great example as he now makes little effort to hide the Transvestite aspect of his impersonation.

There are numbers of books on Transvestites and their wives. Written to help wives understand what it is their husbands need. Many wives do not understand that a happy husband can make a wife happy, but a frustrated man, with edgy nerves cannot. If the wife is intolerant, inflexible, and dismisses the business as a silly habit, then the answer is not easy to find. If the husband is sure the wife will in no way understand or tolerate the cross dressing and he still wants to keep her, he has to live with this situation, dress when he can manage to, put up with his frustrations when he cannot, and all the time expect that one day he will be found out and then expect an explosion. But at least till then he avoided rocking the boat. If the boat will tip over one day, there is no point in rocking early so that it does so, the longer it stays afloat there is always the chance that in time an understanding may be achieved.

I realize that this is a subject upon which there are as many views as circumstances and I have just tried to touch upon some which I have observed and heard about many times.

Yours sincerely,

Gloria

*** ATTENTION ***

To anyone in the Seattle area interested in Bondage and discipline, there is a Rap group on this subject started at the Seattle Counseling Center, 1720 - 16th Ave., Seattle Phone:EA 9-8737. The Center is about two blocks from Group Health Hospital. The date and time is every Tuesday evening at 8:00 PM. It is very informal and no registration or such is required. Just turn up and overcome your shyness. It is just a rap session and it is hoped that it can eventually become a referral service to help people meet others of like persuasion.

There used to be a cross dressers Rap session at the Center and this can be revived if enough interest can be shown. One does not have to turn up 'dressed' for this so if anyone is interested, call the Center or write to Gloria, c/o the Empathy press.

incarnation - life beyond DEATH

THE phenomenon of Incarnation is to say the least, a fascinating one, though rarely experienced by majority of the population. From the data collected by the researchers this phenomenon can be the cause of some of the most befalling psychological problems encountered. The influence of subconscious mind on the action of a human being is an accepted truth. From my discussion of this matter with a number of learned professor and quite a few TV and TS I have reached to the conclusion that the above phenomenon play a major part in most of the cases, if not all.

According to the ancient philosophy of India, the soul of human beings are indestructable. Death can only take place regarding the body, soul remaining the same. With death, the body is destroyed, and the soul is liberated from the body. The soul enters a new body in course of time. The possession of the new body by the soul being dependent upon several factors, one of the main of them being the last desire remaining in the mind just before death. If the last wish happens to be the possession of the body of the other sex, in majority of the cases it will be fulfilled; that is the soul will enter the appropriate body. But in some cases due to some unknown factor it does not take place. When this happens, and the soul retains the desire, the person become dissatisfied with the body and want to transform it to the appropriate form, that is try to change the sex.

The origin of soul is God, and the soul is ultimately assimilated in God himself. In between this period the propagation of soul from body to body is basically controlled by the type of work done by the person, good deeds speed up the journey of soul towards the God, while bad deeds slow down the process. Until the soul is devoid of all its desires it can not be assimilated with God. The degree of desire remaining in the soul for possession of the particular type of body is proportional to the degree of transvestitic or transsexualish of a person. In majority of cases the conscious mind of a person is unaware of this dominant factor, but in some cases this can be realized by the super sensitive mind. And then we have a case where the person can remember the past life, as it is reported in newspapers from time to time.

I met Sita** through Dr. Bannerjee of Rajputana University, who has spend a long time to establish the proper nature of re-incarnation. She is pretty, young lady of medium height and rather plump built, which I have learned later is due to her extreme partiality to sweetness. She has a distinct recollection of her past life, and as we sat there drinking the excellent coffee she has provided, she told her story.

She can remember the incidents of her past life as far back as her sixth year of age. Born as the youngest of the four sons of her well-to-do father, she was not a favorite of her mother, who dearly wanted a girl. As days passed into years she became aware of this, though not outwardly expressed by any way by her parents.

She was pampered by her brothers and her father in every way, but due to some reason she felt a very strong bond of affection between herself and her mother, in spite of her rather distant aloofness. The only time she can find herself basking in the sunshine of motherly love and affection without any guard being put on it, is when on rare occasion her mother dress her in the clothes of the baby girl, which she had made before her birth. Her father tries his best to discourage this practice, but her mother perhaps getting tired of the three boisterous sons, secretly indulges in her past time. As a result of this Sita developed a secret longing of being born as a girl, when she will have the undivided attention of her mother. With passing of time the frequency of being dressed as a girl by her mother decreased, and this made her deeply unhappy. When she was about twelve, she caught a chill which developed into pneumonia. In spite of all the efforts of the doctors, and her parents, she could not be brought back. Sita told us that the thought at the last moment of her life, is "I will come back to you mother as a sweet girl whom you will adore."

\*Sita was known as gopal, during her past life, but to avoid confusion, I prefer to refer to her as a female, instead of male.*

Due to some error in sorting of the postal station in Heaven, Sita's soul missed the home of her parents of previous life. Sita is the second child of a wealthy merchant of Bikaner, some two hundred miles from Jaisalmer - the home of her previous parents. At the birth, due to undecent testicles, an error was made in sex determination of the child. Her parents were charmed by the sweet baby and heaped love and affection on her. When Sita was two years old her mother found out her true sex, and told her father. Both of them adore the little girl, and they do not want to lose her, so they decided to conceal the fact, and continue to rear her as a young girl.

Sita grew up to be one of the sweetest girls in the neighborhood, with her long flowing hair, and her nose and earrings of pearl she is loved by all. When she reached puberty her parents thought it wise to share the secret with her, and told her the truth. But it did not upset her too much, and the little body hair was carefully removed. She found out that by pushing up the testicle and massaging the muscle between her legs, she can hold them up in their socket, and by wearing a tight bandage, she can go along very well as a girl. As her body was making some female hormones the beard growth was not heavy. What little beard was there was removed by periodic wax treatment. By regular application of skin softening creams she developed a glowing complexion, and was the envy of the neighborhood girls. Along with a beautiful body she was taught by her mother how to be a lady of charm and character. Her mother used to tell her often that a beautiful body without a beautiful mind is like a beautifully wrapped packet of junk. So under the guidance of her wise parents she grew up to be a young lady with a mind as beautiful as her body. She still feels a very strong bond of affection with the parents of past life, and visits them from time to time. They are as fond of this lovely girl as her own parents, and shower love and affection on her.

I have met "HER" a couple of times and to me she appears to be as happy and gay as any of the other girls in the neighborhood. In the next article I will describe the story of SONIA - and I am sure you will like it more than this one.

TRANVESTITE PHOTO CLUB MAGAZINE

Transvestite Photo Club Magazine is a unique photo album of the TV World. The first issue has 72 photos of TVs and TSs in their feminine best, plus articles. The main purpose of this publication was not to start a new magazine but to bring to the TV something she has sought for a long time; a publication that is a picture of the TV life style.

Transvestite Photo Club Magazine is this and more. Every issue starting with the first will have photos of TVs in their lingerie, beautiful dresses and heels. The articles have the emphasis on the photo to tell the personal experiences sent in by readers not just a lot of words.

Empathy Press receives many photos that are never used because there is not enough copy with the photo to use in the Letters to the Editor Column. Now you can see these photos in coming issues. The first issue of Transvestite Photo Club Magazine is a composite of the Best of the published and unpublished photos and features received at Empathy Press.

If you buy this publication at the newsstand it would cost you the price of the magazine plus $5.00 to have your photo put in the publication. As a special to mail customers of the Empathy Press you may have your photo in the magazine for only the price of the magazine; $3.00. Use the form below.

A Few Facts About Haircoloring

Women have been coloring their hair since the time of Helen of Troy. Since then, techniques have improved to the stage that today four out of five American women use some sort of haircoloring. As practiced now, this art is safe, unlimited, relatively inexpensive, and gives extremely natural appearing results. More comfortable and durable than wigs, it can help you achieve new heights of femininity.

Haircoloring come in three main types: rinses, semi-permanent, and permanent. Rinses will neither lighten your natural color nor cover grey hair, but they can be washed out. They are much more effective with lighter hair shades. If your hair is highly lightened (bleached), the various far our colors such as pink or blue will hold but can be difficult to remove.

Semi-permanent colorings won't lighten either, however, they do a fair job of covering grey. Also known as five week coloring, they won't wash out, but tend to fade after five or so shampoos. On natural dark hair, they tint only the grey having no effect at all on the rest of the head. A word of warning, though, they can have disastrous results on hair damaged by lighteners and permanents.

Permanent colorings will lighten your natural color, do the best job of covering grey, and will stay with you until your hair grows out. And there is the little catch which keeps the manufacturing and hairdressers in business. Hair grows at the rate of about one half inch per month. That means that in order to keep your roots and the rest of your locks the same color, you have to retouch (tint just the regrowth) every two to six weeks depending on how far you've strayed from that color that keeps coming back at your roots.

At any rate, tints, lighteners, toners and frostings are all permanent hair colorings. They all smell like ammonia and must be mixed with hydrogen peroxide. In general, one brand is just about as good as another if they are properly applied. One type to avoid, however, are metallic salt dyes. They don't use peroxide and can cover grey gradually, however, their big drawback is that not only do they look phony but if combined with peroxide type tints or permanent waves, the results can be absolutely horrendous (such as making your hair come out like a blob of green chewing gum).

Most tint shades, except black, will lighten your hair to some extent. But unless you're lucky, you won't come out the same shade as the package picture. This is because the package picture shows the results the tint will give on pure white hair. Since your hair has some natural color to start with, it takes a real artist to decide which tint shade will give you exactly the color you want.

Lighteners remove color from hair. They are difficult to apply and if used imprudently can really wreck your tresses. They can also give really smashing results if you have the time and money for them. Used alone they can change your hair from brown to a light yellow. In combination with special tints called toners (double process haircoloring), they can help you become any shade you might desire from platinum blonde to fiery redhead. With selected strands of hair. This process, can be extremely difficult to do right, but has the advantage of lasting about four months between retouches.

Now, there's one general rule about haircoloring and it goes something like this: HAVE IT DONE PROFESSIONALLY OR FOR-

GET IT! Like all good rules there are exceptions such as retouches of dark tints, but if you don't want to waste your time, money, and hair you are better off staying away from the drug store specials. The most important ingredients in successful haircoloring are color selection, proper application, and the ability to correct your mistakes. You learn color selection only after about five years of experience. Also, it is just about physically impossible to properly apply color retouches to the back of your own head. Finally, you have neither the know how nor the equipment to fix things up if your hair should happen to turn purple. Haircolorings can, do all these things and their professional skill is worth the extra expense.

Haircoloring can also unlock the door to the beauty shop for you. No matter how you're dressed, most shops will do coloring for you early in the week when business is slow. Once you've established yourself as a serious customer through coloring, the whole range of that shop's services may then be opened up for you.

Of course, if the beauty salon is out of the question for one reason or another, the next best method is to do it with a friend. You can do her color, then she can do yours. The do it yourself way is the least satisfying, but if you stick to a shade close to your natural one, you can't get into too much trouble. With both of these at home techniques, a few helpful hints may come in handy. To begin with, follow the manufacturer's instructions as closely as you can; this is especially important when mixing ingredients. Next, remember that haircoloring other things besides hair. Their stains generally don't come out of clothing. To clean your forehead and ears after a dark tint, rub hard with soapy water and when that doesn't work, try cigarette ashes (yes, they're good for something). Finally, use gloves so that your fingernails don't turn a rather permanent shade of black when working with deep shades.

When you've gone through all this and then like a typical female, decide you don't really like your new color after all, don't panic. There is an escape hatch known as the tint back to natural color. So, instead of waiting a year or two for your hair to grow out, you simply apply more permanent color to get your hair back to where it was when you started. This is very tricky to do and definately a job for a professional. Another job for a professional is combining coloring and permanent waving on the same head of hair. If you'd like to keep your hair, don't try it yourself.

A few words about time and expense should now be in order. Of course, home application will cost you only materials. Professional work will vary depending on whether it is a first time (virgin head) application or a retouch. Virgin applications cost more because they take longer. Tints are done every 4-6 weeks, take about an hour, and cost less than $10.00. Virgin double process work can take up to eight hours in several sessions and costs up to $40.00. These retouches are done every 2-4 weeks, take about three hours and cost about $15.00. Frostings are done every four months, take up to four hours and cost up to $50.00. These prices vary in different areas and you may be able to get the work for half price at a beauty school or for free at a manufacturer's clinic in a major city.

So, while the advertisements may omit a few pertinent facts, if you don't mind suffering a little for beauty's sake, haircoloring can be a welcome addition to your life.

YOUR ADAM'S APPLE AND WHAT TO DO ABOUT IT....

I am sure everyone of us wants to feel more genuine whenever in public. We all go to great extremes to insure that our face is clear of any traces of our other self, we pad ourselves, we strap ourselves, we then spend oodles of money on hairpieces to bring out the best possible, we take gelatin for - stronger nails, we use hormone creams to minimize wrinkles, many of us use tape to tighten the skin on the face, so we put much effort into being at our best.

Have you ever considered that your adams apple sticks out like a sore thumb ... that's unless you are one of the lucky few who hardly has one, or you have had an operation on it, or you always wear scarves or turtleneck sweaters. Wait! Before you tell me that an operation on your adams apple is not worth it, let me ask you, how many of you take hormones, which of course, as your boy self allows you to be detected as a TV/TS, or how many of you have your ears pierced, or how many of you have ultra long hair, or long fingernails? Or how many of you have your body free from hair? Is each of these worth it?

Recently, I made a trip from the East Coast all the way to Portland, Oregon. It was not the first time (or even the second) time I had flown as my better half, but I had never been to the West Coast before. I had worked out signals (or actually they had been worked out for me) so that I would be met at the airport by another TV, who I did not know and who would not be dressed. I was totally relaxed when arriving in Oregon, the trip had been interesting, and the people who had sat next to me were very nice, and off and on we had a conversation the whole trip. It was not until plan "C" had failed at the airport that I started to get concerned. I was to follow plan A, if that failed - then try "B"-well here I was already at Plan "C"! The only next step would have been to find a motel to stay at, and make some other attempts to make contact. After spending quite some time at the airport looking for some sign of recognition - I finally decided to sit at the busiest corner where the majority of people coming off the planes and those trying to meet them, would be.

About 1 hour after my arrival, and now starting to get nervous, a gentleman in his late 50's came over to me, and asked, "Are you Connie from Connecticut?" "Yes", I replied and he told me that he looked everyone over at least 10 times and the only way he finally decided to ask me, that I was the only girl there with so prominent an adams apple!

Well, that got me to thinking, and I decided to contact some of my very fine transsexual girlfriends to see if they had had similar problems and if so, what they did about it.

I was surprised to find that many of them had been terribly aware of their adams apple showing - yet few had really done much about it. For a girl like me, who loves to swim, play tennis, mountain climb, and do much bike riding - it is almost impossible to always keep my neck covered. So my next step was to contact doctors in the New York area to find out just what is done, and the cost.

I know for many of you, the cost would be burdensome, but I ask you, how much have you spent already on hairpieces you don't like, or shoes, or dresses? How much have you spent on hormones? Isn't it worth it, to protect all your investments up till now by taking out added insurance on not being read? In the New York area I found that the costs were from $400.00 to $800.00 for the adams apple removal. Incidentally, they never do remove the adams apple at all. They, instead shave it, and get it down to size! Some typical questions you might have: Is it a dangerous and tricky operation? Well, let's put it this way - the actual shaving isn't that tricky, but they are working so close to the vocal box, that I feel only the most competent doctor should do it. Can I get it done in one day in a doctor's office? Believe it or not, many doctors are willing to perform the operation right in their office with a local anesthesia and you could leave afterwards - however you best would want to come back the next day to have yourself checked out. It is also possible to have it done by a plastic surgeon where he would check you into a hospital and the next day you would be operated on and have a general anesthesia instead of a local. There are advantages to going this route. First of all, there is some possible complications from having a local which might not show up until later, but of course to enter a hospital costs additional money. This is one area where you, yourself would have to decide. Does your voice change? The main change which all the girls have is that we seem to have slightly less power to our voice - but we of course would normally never be using that much power anyway. Some girls have told me that their voice actually seemed to lower just a little, but for me the opposite held true. I feel that I can actually talk in a much higher pitch with ease; but again everyone is different so please don't have the operation to get a higher pitch. You might end up with a lower one.

(These are some additional questions which could be added:)

How can I locate a doctor who will do this operation?

Actually there are two ways. If you are already receiving hormones, the doctor to whom you go now probably would be able to refer to you a suitable physician. In the NY City area, some of the doctors who handle transsexuals will also perform this operation. The other method is to look up plastic surgeons in the yellow pages and call them and ask them if they are familiar with and have done before, a shaving of the thyroid cartilage. If they say yes, then ask for an appointment for a consultation.

Does the operation show?

In truth depending on how good a plastic surgeon you got, there will be possibly some small signs of the operation. However, there usually are where the skin of the neck is folded together when your head is in its normal position. If you have any questions on this, be sure to ask the surgeon, just how much of the skin cutting will show.

Is this operation all that important?

This all depends on you. If you are easily readable in the first place, then forget it, you would be wasting your time and money. However, if you are one who spends much time as your girl self and goes many places, it is really an important consideration. Again, depending upon the type of activity you engage in as your girl self - it could be more or less important. For instance, I always use my own hair and of course have to have it done by a professional at a beauty parlor and I sure wouldn't want the lady next to me (or her operator) to detect me by my adams apple giving me away! When you go to a beauty parlor, they have you lean your head way way back, of course, to get your hair washed and shampooed. With me, I have been playing the piano in a public place many times with low cut necklines, and with a spotlight on me and etc. -it could have easily caused trouble. I am sure many of you don't lead the active type of life that I do, but where you want to feel free and at ease, knowing that you don't have to worry about your adams apple - it is a blessing!

Now, if ever again, I am lost in an airport - I won't have to worry about my adams apple giving me away!

Coronation Ball

Photos By: Elmer Buzzard

The third annual Coronation Ball was a grand success last February seventeen in the Spanish Ballroom of the plush Olympic Hotel in downtown Seattle. The girls arrived in tuxedos and ties, the boys showed up in feathered dance costumes, veils, jewels, and other extraordinary attire.

The Queen City business Guild --- a fifteen member group consisting of representatives of Gay Bars and businesses organized lavish costume ball. The guild was founded in 1969 as a clearing house for information about homosexuality and has since worked with city & state government for equal business rights, helped raised money for the children's orthopedic hospital sponsored myriad gay community activities and much more.

At midnight, the beautiful Miss LOLA was crowned "Empress LOLA of Seattle for 1974." The crowd was so excited and closely packed that cameramen and news reporters were unable to set up equipment as planned, but fortunately our Empathy press photographer was on the scene and managed to elbow his way near enough to get the only shots of the actual crowning!

The ball continued until the wee hours of the morning with sequence sparkling in the spotlights, gorgeous -- evening gowns every where and other gay delights. The Coronation Ball is an annual event.

The Glade on HOTEL ST.

Story By: Bernerd F. Park

It's night on Honolulu's Fort Street Mall, and the walk north on Hotel Street is a surrealistic journey across the Pacific. Here, by Chinatown, two miles from Waikiki, all races mingle. Porno bookstores compete with blue movies with signs in Japanese, Korean and English. And there's probably anything for a price. The guy with me hurries me along.

We walk a few blocks. The buildings part to let the trade winds through, and my friend and I notice more faces that are real Hawaiian along with the Filipino, US Marine Corps, and mainland Black. We pass painted hookers that scout the shadows. No thanks, we're not interested.

By the famous Wo Fat restaurant, where Honolulu's Chinese have their big nights out, a blonde with too much makeup leans, grinning, into a car window to rap with two of Honolulu's finest. I feel jaded. But we're nearly there.

Across the street is the Swing Club, popular since its fight with the State over the right to have live sex on stage. In front of the club on our side, we can't tell whether the ladies are girls or boys. We've reached The Glade. We forget what we've seen coming here, and our journey becomes one of the mind.

You have to be a TV to work here. There is only a dollar cover charge, and the drinks are good and inexpensive. And at ten o'clock the floods light up a stage that you can't believe. It's pretty. The M.C. speaks, and people laugh, sensing burlesque.

"Aloha, ladies and gentlemen," he says lisping the "ladies" and slurring the "gentlemen". The crowd roars.

"Welcome to the Boys Will Be Girls Revue. Let's have a big hand for our dancing boys, featuring Mr. China Nuyen and Mr. Orlando Delsose."

But what I see on stage, with a male dancer in top hat and tails, pantomining the sound track from "Cabaret", is merely the most stunning woman in the place. "Mr." China Nuyen. Hauntingly Oriental. She dances right out of an adolescent dream, and the feminine mobility of her face begs for love. And a guy near me is saying:

"It's a man. How the hell can that be?"

Between shows, I find the answer from Macie Williams, the "Main Joe", and show director. I remark that the audience is interesting. There are tourists from every where, middle-aged Hawaiian couples, and servicemen with their chicks. Fifteen sailors off an Australian destroyer are right up front letting their beer warm to their taste.

"I guess you wouldn't call it a gay club," Macie is saying. "We just have a different kind of entertainment. We're light years away from Waikiki." The owners Daisy Aguiar and Attilio Leonardi, have instilled that philosophy in the performers. The result avoids the gay stereotypes.

Over a drink on Macie's tab, I am surprised to learn that the cast is all local. I would have guessed magic cities like Singapore and Manila. But Hawaii is like that. The Glade has depended on local talent since 1965, and its business is growing. The performers change, and the material evolves, but The Glade endures.

"I believe I'm a woman," Macie is telling me. "So I accept it. We're not persecuted in Hawaii. My mother told me, 'be whatever you want, but be good at it.'" I remember Macie's hula in the white holoku, and I can't argue. Then she will adopt a baby, according to the ancient Hawaiian custom of hanai. Macie buys another round while I watch Raquel G. Gregory walk slowly by, dresses to the nines between shows.

The comic relief of Raquel's raunchy rendition of "Ya Gotta Have Boobs" is just the right touch, I decide. And when China Nuyen comes back out to a song by Santana, I'm warm inside.

Now the crowd is still, not laughing. They get more than they expected, and they come alive to applaud wildly after the number. I see China end her dance with some sadness in me. She's leaving for Chicago - a big dancing contract, Macie tells me. When she whirls off stage, I watch the crowd and sense their confusion. The lines from Samuel Coleridge's poem come to me:

*And all who hear should see them there,
And all should cry, Beware! Beware!
His flashing eyes, his floating hair!
Weave a circle round him thrice,
And close your eyes with holy dread,
For he on honey-dew hath fed,
And drunk the milk of Paradise.*

View north on North Hotel Street, Honolulu.

I wish I could tell the audience to just dig it. But I see that they loved the show, and it's okay. And we have to leave.

Outside at two-thirty in the morning, the "girls" are promenading for the cars driving by.

"Wow!" says the guy with me. I grin. The Glade was a friendly place.

Then he says, "We ought to catch the Monday show. It's all Polynesian."

"Let's," I say, and we head for the car. A trace of perfume hangs in the night air.

THE FASCINATING WORLD OF TRANSVESTISM
In Every Issue

Transvestite Photo Club Magazine #2. This is the second issue of the most unique magazine published about transvestism. The Magazine has been given a completely new format with New, Never before Published articles. The page size now is a full 8½x11". Issue number (2) continues with the idea of a publication that is a Photo Album of the TV life style. Here in issue #2 you will again find TVs in their best lingerie, beautiful dresses and heels; But Now something new has been added. You can now do more than just look at these lovely 'girls' you can write to them because the new issue of Transvestite Photo Club Magazine has a personal section.

The articles in this new issue will really inform and fascinate you. Here are the contents.

You've Got What It Takes: A personal experience article by Jessie Collins. "If you got what it takes, don't let some pimp take what you got". This is an unusual article about Jessie's experience with a pimp.

This is My Story: A story of a guy who gave up his boy clothes to live the life of a 'Girl'. 'Her' experience working at a Department Store.

Planning Your Wardrobe: There are FIVE points you should know in selecting your clothes and accessories. Knowing these points you can buy the clothes that are just right for you no matter what your size is.

Love of Being a Girl: By: Karen. A beautiful true story of her life as a TV.

Pamper Yourself: By Pamela. When you step out of your Boy clothes into that pretty dress let Pamela teach you how to put on a face to match. Another Big problem to most 'girls' are their hands. Are yours too large, rough in appearance? Do they give you away when you go out? Pamela tells you what to do about it.

Personals: This is where you read about the interests of these beautiful 'girls' you have just looked at in the Photo Album. They want you to write to them.

If you buy this publication at the newsstand it would cost you the price of the magazine plus $5.00 to have your photo and Ad put in the publication. As a special to Mail Order customers of Empathy Press you may have your photo and Ad in the magazine for only the price of the magazine; $3.00. Use the form below.

"Little did Paul Hadley realize he would be moved to refer to Agatha Dodge's yacht as the ignominious S.S. De Sade. . . . So begins an adventure that was destined to become a JOURNEY INTO TORMENT. Hired by Agatha's unscrupulous captain, Red Lansing, twenty-four-year-old Paul Hadley thought that a summer spent as deck hand aboard the yacht Agatha D. would be the experience of a lifetime.

Too late he realized that he was headed on a cruise into the very maelstrom of horror and depravity such as he had never known existed.

But when he attempted to escape, events of a totally unexpected nature intervened. Once again, he found himself a victim, emasculated, brutalized, taught the meaning of the lash, the grinding pain of a woman's heel!

Richard Huxtable sits studying the prophetic face of the white witch Mabel Black as she slowly weaves a pattern of life that lies before him. When Mabel tells Richard that she sees a trip in his near future, her eyes become wide and circular revealing the fright that she feels for his future. "You should not take this trip, is all," she tells Richard, but the determined young man foolishly goes on his trip to Setonwood to interview for a job as jack-of-all trades at the estate of Claire Seton. It is here that Richard Huxtable's troubles and intrigue begin, and it is here that the reader's mind begins a spinning contrail of massive contradictions, ones that whirl the reader as they whirl Richard Huxtable through a fantasy -- or is it a real world -- that leads him to be the dominated slave of the warped demonic Claire Seton. Shadow of the Lash is the most mysterious and puzzling plot of witchcraft and modern gothicism that has been made available to the reader since Psycho. We guarantee it'll scare the pants off you -- just as it scared the pants off Richard Huxtable when he felt the dark forboding lash curling round his loins in fiery seething pain.

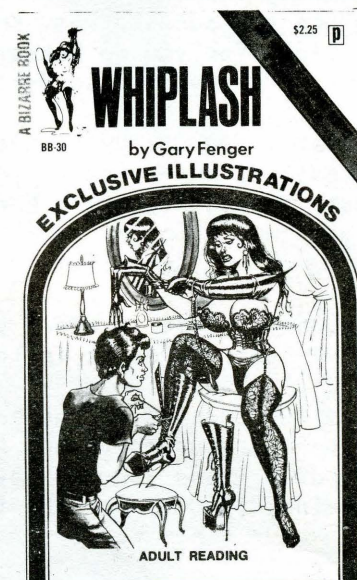

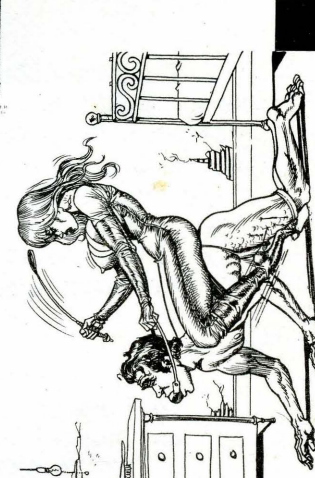

Stacy O'Keefe prided himself in being a lady-killer, that and a rather shrewd and ingenious thief. And when he arrived on Stuyvesant Island, an exclusive resort community catering to the rich and well-heeled, he discovered the biggest challenge of his life.

For Millicent and Anita St. John lived amidst riches such as Stacy had always dreamed about. He made it a point to seek out the voluptuous and tawny Anita, hoping to gain access to the St. John Mansion.

But O'Keefe got more than he bargained on. He was hired all right, but hired as their exclusive slave. Tortured with cruel and bizarre weapons of domination, forced to wear rubber garments and cater to their perverse sexual desires, the only thing that kept him going was the robbery he intended to pull, the riches he thought he could easily abscond with.

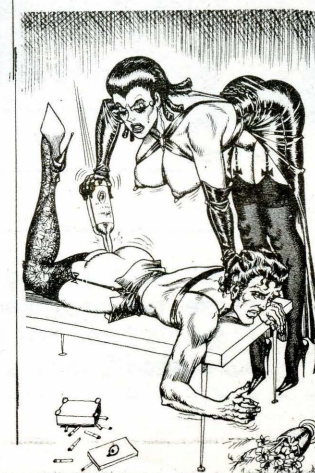

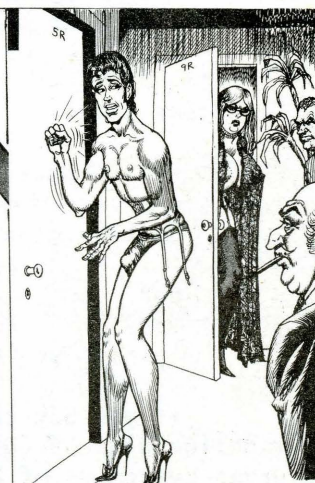

But unfortunately for the studly O'Keefe, fate dealt him a cruel hand. And the culmination of Millicent and Anita's sadistic pleasures taken at O'Keefe's expense was the staging of his gang-rape. When the two brutal women were through with him, he had indeed been Taught To Obey.

For four weeks the letters had arrived, each one more horrifying than the one before. Perry Brice lived in mortal fear until one day the phone rang and the voice on the other end whispered, "You are nothing, little man, nothing but my slave!"

Thus begins the nightmare of bondage as wealthy executive Perry Brice learns to submit to the will and domination of a cruel and haughty taskmaster, a hellish amazon who knew how to wield whips as well as weapons of emotional degradation and humiliation.

Her name was Ingrid, Miss Ingrid. And she wanted Perry's money more than anything else in the world. Catering to his fetish for rubber undergarments, she slowly and insidiously ensnared him in her web of complicity and masculine obedience and domination. And as Brice learned his lessons, he paid the price until Ingrid had everything she wanted, everything but the tattered bloodied shirt off his back.

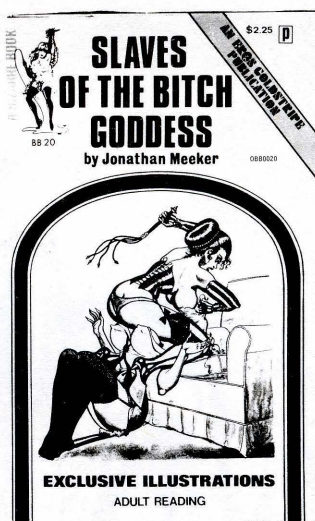

EMERALD DUPRE: six feet of voluptuous sensuality, sex on wheels, dominator of the most virile of men. And, most of all, the cleverest spy and undercover agent in the business. No wonder they came to Emerald DuPre when all else failed, when the master counterfeiter and inhumanly oversized superstud, Emilio Bucco, continued to slip through the best laid of schemes and skeins, cleverly outwitting them at their fiendish game of intrigue.

EMERALD DUPRE who, posing as a dealer in rare books of erotica, meets the invincible Bucco, teaching him more about her ways - the wrath of the whip, the leer of the lash, the deadly sting of the dildo - than he had ever dared imagine in his most shocking and depraved nightmares. For if Bucco had a yen for leather and rubber, Emerald had a yen to give him anything he wanted, so long as it caused him pain, so long as it gave her pleasure.

EMERALD DUPRE, the supersexed dominatrix who used Bucco, his young chauffeur, his burly henchmen, teaching all of them that discipline and bondage began at home. How she outwits the master swindler makes up a story that is too savage, too diabolical and lust-riden to be taken lightly. But then, no one who ever met Emerald ever took her lightly, especially in the case known as DateLine: Domination.

Andrea Carlyle was a woman obsessed. The tall and haughty bitch goddess had never forgotten her father's sadistic excesses. And now, as a young and voluptuous woman, she was finally able to get even with his senseless cruelty. First, there had been Howie, a boy she met at college. She had turned him into Helena, a simpering, cowering, groveling figure of a man. Completely dominating him, she degraded and humiliated him for her own sexual pleasure. Then, as a practicing psychologist, she used her male patients as if they were toys. Spanking was not enough for her, nor was forcing her pitiable degraded men to wear dog collars and corsets. But when she took a young man into her home, she transformed him from Tony into Antonette. Obedience was the name of the game, sodomy and dildo: the tools of the trade. Tony learned all right, right to the bitterly humiliating and shameful end. For this was how Andrea got her kicks. Stern and haughty, arrogant and completely domineering, completely in control of men, she always always got her way, no matter what.

Vic Newcombe was looking for a hot story, not a new way of life. But that's what he found the night he stumbled into Irene's, an ominous bar and favorite meeting place for women who loved leather, who craved domination, who needed to inflict pain to arouse their insatiable and maddened sexual appetites. These were the dominatrices, the amazons in high heels and skintight leather attire, as adept at bondage as they were at masculine abuse. Vic wanted to write a book about their life style and so he turned to Irene, the owner of the bar, for inspiration. But she gave him much more than just a good story.

After suffering a vicious sadosexual attack by three hot-blooded bitch goddesses in the back room of her bar, he went home with Irene, never suspecting what was in store for him. There, amidst wild sexual pleasures, she taught him the ABC's of bondage and masculine debasement.

Her tortures came in many packages, all wrapped with the succulent tinsel of her lush and arousing body. And the more time he spent with her, the more he learned. But once he had transformed himself into a leather-clad stud, once he had sold his life, for the final and explosive surprise of his life, for he had offended The Leather Bar Ladies.

PUBLICATIONS

NEW TRENN'S MAGAZINE issue number(4) has these fine articles and features:

- (1) Letters to the Editor
- (2) TV Counsel Column; Advice for TVs
- (3) What's In The Law. Some good questions and answers on how the law looks at going out dressed and what is suggested so you won't have any problems. This article was written for Seattle, but the ideas are good 'MOST' other places too.
- (4) A short history of Rubber Clothing
- (5) On the Semantics of Transvestism. A non-fiction article on how you as a TV or TS can better relate to your desires.
- (6) Men as Maids (Fiction Story)
- (7) Astrology and the Transvestite
- (8) My Everyday Reality. A beautiful personal TV experience.
- (9) Petticoat Punishment. A real woman's view on the subject
- (10) Photo Album. A look at TVs across the country. 14 pages of TV photos.
- (11) Breast Prosthetics. This article (almost 10,000 words) was an exclusive in NEW TRENN'S MAGAZINE and the information set forth is not available anywhere at any price. This article can make you the 'girl' you have always wanted to be. Recent developments on plastic material have caused a breakthrough in the prosthetic industry. For the first time, it is now possible to create strikingly realistic breasts (prosthetics), using simple techniques in the privacy of your home.**The developments of realistic prosthetic breasts have been long awaited by both TVs, amateur and professional female impersonators. Until recently, outside the rigors of hormone treatment, it was not possible to create realistic mammary growth and cleavage. The best corseting and taping techniques were passable when used with gowns of correct cut, but completely unsatisfactory when used with low cut plunging necklines. However, AT LAST you can perform (or go out in public) in low cut gowns or even in the altogether, before the camera or the most discriminating audience without detection **How is this possible? By creating your own breasts out of special compounds available most anywhere. This article is a complete manual of easy step by step instructions on how to make you look like a real woman. If you can't go the hormone route to have feminine breasts this is the next best thing. $4.00

NEW TRENN'S MAGAZINE issue number (5) has these fine articles and features:

- (1) Letters to the Editor
- (2) Dear Julie with more answers to your TV problems.
- (3) Two true transvestite personal experience articles.
- (4) Book reviews, you learn which books are worth reading and which are not.
- (5) Jamie's Little Bit; Information, hints and legal information for TVs and TSs.
- (6) The Drag Queen of Hollywood; This article gives you details on the Drag Scene in Hollywood, Calif. It tells you where to go to be part of it.
- (7) Some Thoughts on Transsexualism; If you are considering a sex change you must read this first:

(8) Electrolysis for the Transvestite and the Transsexual; This article gives you complete details on the removal of hair from the face and other parts of the body. This article also has many drawings, it tells you what it will cost and how it is done.

(9) NEW TRENN'S number (5) has a large personal column with almost 100 listings. $4.00.

NEW TRENN'S MAGAZINE issue number (6) has these fine articles and features:

- (1) Letters to the Editor: See a member go from a boy to a sexy girl in ten beautiful photos.
- (2) Dear Julie: Her largest column yet. With the answers you have been waiting for.
- (3) Hormones and Me. By SALLY DOUGLAS: You may have seen other articles written about hormones of maybe ONE or TWO thousand words but this is the long awaited article written expressly for TVs and TSs and it is over 10,000 words in length. Nothing has been left out of this article. It will answer every question you have asked or even thought about and in complete detail.
- (4) The Double/The Twins: Russell E. Smith, Jr. is not a transvestite or an impersonator but a man and a woman who share one body. This is the most unusual article you will ever read. All the photos in this article are professional studio type.
- (5) Eureka...It Works. If you are like most TVs, one of your biggest problems is your beard. This article gives step by step details on how to cover it up. It is written with the thought in mind that most TVs have had little or no experience with the use of make-up. The Author takes you by the hand and tells you what to buy, where to buy it and how to put it on.
- (6) Transvestite Boutique: DRAWINGS and PHOTOS of Cathy.
- (7) The Drag Scene: News and information about the club members.
- (8) How About a Good Photo of Yourself? Nothing is more disappointing than to get your film back from the Drug Store of your TV photos and they have turned out bad. This article was written by a TV for TVs on how to take good photos of yourself and your TV friends 'dressed'.
- (9) Some Thoughts on Transsexualism: Tells you how to live in public as a woman.
- (10) Personals: New listings and New Photos. As you can see by the contents this issue of NT is the most informative issue and magazine ever published in the field of TV. $4.00
