

EDITOR PHœNIX :

A dunderhead member of the "finest" recently arrested one Miss Denyse because she chose to dress in what is called male attire. Through the act of this ignoramus Miss Denyse was deprived of her liberty for several days, only to be discharged by the judge at last because she had committed no crime in thus dressing.

Now we would ask, who is responsible for this unlawful act of the officer? Should the people or the officer be compelled to pay damages to Miss Denyse? It is clear that someone should be punished for this act of injustice toward her. It is no excuse for either society or the officer to say she unsexed herself.
